WINNIPEG, Oct. 26.
The railway question has taken a serious turn since yesterday. The C. P. R. placed a dead engine cross the dump of the R. V. R. where it is to cross the C. P. R. South-western branch, 4 miles west of the city. To-day Attorney General Martin, applied for help to force a crossing and nearly two hundred citizens of Winnipeg were sworn in as special constables by the chief clerk, among them are many business men of Winnipeg, and proceeded to the crossing, besides many more numbering nearly five hundred. Supt. Whyte of the C.P.R. hearing of this took about 350 of his employees and also went out, they also were sworn in as special constables under the railway act by Messrs. Leacock, Nixon and Campbell, J. P.'s. When they arrived at the crossing things looked so serious that Leacock, Nixon and Campbell made requisition for the militia but as the track layers did not get right up to the engine the citizens returned home and the military did not turn out. The provincial authorities notified the three J. P.'s that their commissions were cancelled, but this was not so. Supt. Whyte is at the crossing with his full force, who are living in boarding cars. The C. P. R. have obtained an injunction restraining the R. V. R. from crossing the C.P.R. It will be argued Tuesday before Chief Justice Taylor.

WINNIPEG, Oct. 25.
The Chief Justice yesterday dissolved the injunction restraining the R. V. R. from crossing the C. P. R. and gave the government call to 200 men to go to-day and remove the two dead engines across a crossing. The only men who have been sworn in and up to night nothing has been done. Wednesday night the government put in a diamond at Headingley, but the C.P.R. at once removed it. The C.P.R. have obtained another injunction. To-day Supt. Whyte went out to Morris and erected a siding where the Brandon extension is to cross the C.P.R. This siding will be filled with cars at once. The government are determined to reach Portage la Prairie. The C.P.R. are just as determined they shall not. Violence is feared.

WINNIPEG, Oct. 26.
Last night the government surprised as C.P.R. and placed a diamond on the crossing and left twelve constables to guard it but Supt. Whyte with 50 men overpowered the constables took up the diamond and brought it to the city.

Mass meetings held in Winnipeg and Portage la Prairie pledged moral and physical support to the government but so far support has been entirely moral.

Supt. Whyte says his orders are not to allow the R.V.R. to cross his road Supt. Whyte says he will carry them out if he has to call all the employees to do so. He says he can muster 2000 men in 10 hours. Wheat has gone down. No. 1 hard is being bought for $1 to $1.05.

EDMONTON BULLETIN, OCT. 27, 1888.

THE MACKENZIE BASIN.

The agricultural capabilities of the Mackenzie basin received the greater share of the attention of the senate committee and occupy the greater part of the committee's report. Regarding these capabilities great doubt has generally been expressed and to clear up that doubt the committee has given its best attention, with excellent success. The northerly latitude of even the most southern part of the Mackenzie basin has generally been considered as placing it beyond the limit of successful agriculture. Judging it by the eastern coast of North America as a standard it certainly is so, as the map accompanying the report shows. Latitude 50 is given as the northern limit of the cultivation of wheat in Ontario and Quebec, while the very source of the Mackenzie is in latitude 53, and its basin has no great extent until it passes north of latitude 54. At the same time parts of England, Ireland and Germany the whole of Scotland, Norway, Sweden and Denmark, and over half of Russia are north of latitude 54, in all of which regions agriculture is the chief industry. The suitability of the climate of the Mackenzie for agriculture depends not upon its latitude, but upon the other causes which affect its climate. Has it the advantages of Northern Europe or the disadvantages of the eastern coast of North America?

The mild climate of northern Europe is generally considered to be due to the flow of warm Atlantic water from the tropics to its northwestern coasts. While the cold climate of the eastern coast of North America is due to the perpetual flow of Arctic ice southward along its coast from the unexplored regions near the pole. There is a flow of warm Pacific water from the tropics to the northwest coast of North America and there is no flow of Arctic ice along its shores. Consequently the climate of the Mackenzie region which feels the effect of the warm waters of the Pacific resembles more nearly that of northern Europe than that of the eastern coast of North America. A latitude for beyond the wheat limit on the east coast may be for within it on or near the west coast.

The evidence of Professor Dawson, the most eminent scientist in Canada, who has personally examined the upper Peace river country and the upper waters of the Liard and Yukon gives most interesting evidence as to the agricultural value of the country both direct and comparative. He submits weather reports which prove the climate of the upper Peace river to be similar to the climate of the Upper Saskatchewan and estimates the quantity of immediately available arable land in that district at 23,500 square miles. He believes that an equal quantity exists on the Liard with an almost equally good climate and another area of at least 30,000 square miles west of the Liard on the headwaters of the Yukon and Mackenzie rivers, where at least barley, oats, potatoes and hay can be cultivated profitably. These three areas he estimates as capable of supporting a purely agricultural population of 1,500,000, with an equal population of fishermen, hunters, lumber men, miners, freighters, traders, etc., a total population of 3,000,000, in a region which has not now a population of 300 besides Indians. Comparing this district with a part of Russia he says: "I looked up the circumstances of the northern provinces of Russia and took the province which seemed to compare most closely with the region alluded to, both in its relation to Russia to the Atlantic, corresponding to the relation of this country to the Pacific, and in its latitude—the province of Volodga. That province has a total area of 155,498 square miles and it is chiefly drained to the north, like the Mackenzie region. It lies between latitude 58 and 66. It is about 750 miles in greatest length and 300 in greatest width. It is drained by the Devina river chiefly. Its products are carried by this river to Archangel and exported thence in vessels by the White Sea, in the same way that we hope this northern country of ours may be served by the Mackenzie and Arctic Sea. The mouth of the Devina is in latitude 65, only a little south of the latitude of the mouth of the Mackenzie. The climate of the two countries is very similar. The winters are severe and the summers warm. There is no very heavy rainfall, such as we find near the western coasts bordering on the Atlantic and on the Pacific. The exports from that province of Volodga are oats, rye, barley, hemp, flax and pulse. The mineral products are salt, copper, iron and marble. Horses and cattle are reared, and the skins of various wild animals, pitch and turpentine are exported. This province supports a population 1,101,000.

Professor Dawson's estimate of the agricultural value of the regions to which he has specially alluded cannot be considered overdrawn in view of his scientific reputation, and what is achieved under similar conditions in Russia. Indeed as he only speaks of certain limited areas the impression is created that the remainder of the vast region is comparatively valueless. This would be altogether a mistake. He says nothing whatever of the Athabasca river country, the most southerly part of the whole region, certainly the latitude cannot be at fault and there is no reason to believe that the soil is either. But because the surface is covered with timber of greater or less value, and therefore exploration is difficult except along the streams, it is commonly set down as valueless except to the lumbermen, without good reason.

THE N. P. rate on wheat from Winnipeg and Portage la Prairie to Duluth is fixed at 21 cents per hundred pounds. Last season the C. P. R. charged 24 cents per hundred from these points and 22 cents from Morris. The passenger rate will remain $14.40 as at present to St. Paul, but second class and dining cars will be put on. The Free Press complains that the reductions in rates are not sufficient considering the sacrifices made by the people of Manitoba to secure competition. They certainly are not as great as they might, could or should have been. But on the other hand it should be remembered that since last year the price of wheat has doubled. Without competition there is no doubt that the C. P. R., acting on the principle of all monopoly railroads, of charging all the traffic will bear would have doubled the wheat rates to the people of Manitoba instead of lowering them 3 cents per hundred pounds. The low rates of last year were imposed in fear of prospective competition and because the traffic would not bear a higher rate owing to the remarkably low price of grain. Not because the C. P. R. would not taken more if it could or dared.
